Rail Executives Predict Crisis Is Nearing End

Optimistic Over Outlook Under Transportation Act of 1920 and Plead That It Be Given Fair Trial

Readjustment of Expense of Operating to Revenue

Kruttschnitt Optimistic

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau WASHINGTON, May 22.—Supplements from the testimony before the Senste Committee on Interstate Committee, railroad executives have filed with the committee a series of statesith the testing forth their belief that the railroad swill produce a much brighter outlook and make it possible to effect more readjustments of rates with consents setting forth their belief that the railroad problem will be worked out.

Wr. Kruttschnitt Optimistic Mr. Kruttschnitt optimistic Mr. Kruttschnitt optimistic Mr. Kruttschnitt in his statement says:

"I de not want to be understood as pessimistic. I believe that the situation is clearing and that the reidjustments of the operating expenses of the railroads will produce a much brighter outlook and make it possible to effect more readjustments of rates with consequent benefits to commerce and industry generally.

satisfactorily under the existing law and manifesting a measure of optimism in regard to the future cutlock.

The railroad inquiry will be resumed to-merrow, with A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central, continuing his testimony. The executives who have thus far testified have stressed the point that the difficulties of the railroads during the last year and a half have largely grown out of the abnormal expenses forced upon them, which they were unable to meet even from increased rates approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The statements laid before the committee are signed by T. De Witt Cuyler, chairman of the Association of Railway Executives; Julius Krutschnitt, chairman of the Baltimore & Ohio, and A. H. Smith, of the New York Central.

to each other, which they do not at this time.

"The transportation act of 1920 does, in fact, make future successful operation of railroads possible as privately owned and operated properties. That I thoroughly believe. It is necessary, of course, if they are to succeed, that the railroads should cooperate effectively in order to carry out the spirit of the act. The railroads are attempting to do that through several agencies, and particularly through a new agency—the Mr. Kruttschnitt in his statement ticularly through a new agency—the advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives.

Fuel Reductions Expected

"It is expected that substantial reduction will be secured in the price of fuel for 1921; in fact, a number of contracts have already been made, effective as of April 1, much under last year's prices. Other material prices are showing a gradual decline, and as materials and supplies now in stock are consumed and gradually replaced with materials purchased at lower figures there will be reduced charges to expenses on this account, all of which will be reflected in lower operating costs. Meanwhile railroad representatives in conference with the Interstate Commerce Commission are making Fuel Reductions Expected such rate adjustments from time to time as are found necessary in order to remove inequalities and recistablish proper relationships."

Time and patient effort will cure the ills of the railroads, President Smith says in his statement.

"The railroads' management," he said, "hampered by the necessity of undertaking operation of property burdened with large advances in expenses, with under-maintenance of way and equipment, and further burdened with the additional increase of expenses by reason of orders of the labor board, moved all the tonnage that was offered during 1920 and endeavored to make substantial progress toward restoring the property to the standard which the best judgment considered necessary to enable it to do preperly and safely the business of the public.

ing expenses have been in the main due to the great war. War necessities broke through and largely destroyed normal conditions in the industrial world. The materials of war had to be supplied at any cost of labor and material. This situation had to be met in the railroad world and it was met. "The war ended, but normal conditions could not at once be restored. That restoration will come through time and patient effort, but pre-war or normal conditions and a normal cost of living can only be restored by general regulation in the cost of both labor and material."

For the Association of Railway Ex-

"The transportation act has not broken down. The present difficulties of the railroads are not due to the transportation act, and the transportatransportation act, and the transportation act provides effective machinery for remedying, in so far as it may be done by national legislation, the difficulties in which the railroads now find themselves. Feeling, as we do, that the world has definitely turned the corner of its most acute depression, so we feel that the railroad situation has likewise passed through its darkest hour and has now definitely turned for the better."

The materials of war had to be supplied at any cost of labor and material. This situation had to be met market, and the thirty barge loads scattered around the city in various stages of unloading were being ridden to brick-hungry jobs so fast that the situation to-day is that unless more brick comes into the city soon building material yards must, close for lack of construction work.

The points at issue in these two strikes were nearing settlement, however, at the week end. Some of the brick handlers were back at work on the basis of handling brick at 80 cents.
